SJU | ALUMNI

Dear SJU Alumni and Friends,

Journey through the timeless cradle of the Renaissance to one of Italy's most fabled provinces, where bucolic landscapes of rolling hills are dotted with ancient rose-tiled roof villages, 500-year-old farmhouses and walled, medieval hilltop towns. Here, the rhythms of life still revolve around both the harvesting of olive groves and vineyards first planted by the Etruscans nearly 3,000 years ago and the renowned artistic heritage left by such masters as Dante, Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci.

We are delighted to offer this extraordinary program with accommodations for two nights in the heart of Florence, and five nights ideally located within walking distance of the spectacular Piazza del Campo in Siena. Experience the true essence of life in these magnificent cities, visit four UNESCO World Heritage sites and travel to rustic Chianti, known for its world-famous wine.

Explore colorful villages, meet welcoming residents and taste the robust cuisines that have gratified travelers for centuries. Learn more about Etruscan and medieval history, the exquisite artistic and architectural legacy of great Italian Renaissance masters and the centuries-old secrets of world-renowned wine and olive oil. Hear enriching lectures, learn to speak some Italian and use it during the exclusive VILLAGE FORUM™ where local residents will share perspectives on the area's modern life and culture.

Additional optional tours visit Pisa to see the one-of-a-kind leaning tower, Sant'Antimo to attend a specially arranged church concert by monks performing Gregorian chants, Montalcino and a culinary school in Siena for a cooking demonstration. To compliment your tour, an exclusive two night Rome Post-Program Option is offered and features the magnificent ancient highlights of the Imperial city, a UNESCO World Heritage site.

This excellent travel value includes all accommodations, specially arranged excursions and the opportunity to experience a unique Italian itinerary not available anywhere else. I encourage you to reserve space now while Early Booking Savings are available.

Sincerely,

Tom Monaghan

Florence

The birthplace of the Renaissance, this iconic UNESCO World Heritage site is a treasure trove of the period's achievements in art, architecture and literature. Dante, Boccaccio and Giotto established the intellectual ascendancy of Florence in the first half of the 14th century and that intellectual and artistic verve has resounded through the city ever since. Until the mid-1700s, Florence was one of Europe's most prosperous, powerful and progressive cities, as well as a mecca for Italy's greatest artists, sculptors and architects who left an unparalleled artistic heritage. The Galleria dell'Accademia, originally an art school founded in 1563, houses Michelangelo's David. This magnificent sculpture was carved from marble from the Carrara Mountains when Michelangelo was twenty-six years old and is considered to be his crowning achievement. The Uffizi Gallery includes a collection of masterpieces in one of the oldest and most famous museums in the Western World.

Observe firsthand one of the ancient traditions of the monks of Sant'Antimo as they sing Gregorian chants in this bucolic idyll.

San Gimignano's charming Piazza della Cisterna is easily identified by its 800-year-old stone well.

Pisa Option

This beautifully preserved medieval city is famous for its Piazza dei Miracoli, a wide, walled area at the heart of the city recognized as one of the main centers for medieval art in the world. The square features the impressive 11th-century Duomo (Cathedral), the largest Baptistery in Italy and the Leaning Tower of Pisa, the construction of which began in 1173.

Siena

Set amidst Tuscany's rolling hills, Siena is a classic medieval Italian town. Founded by the Etruscans and later annexed by the Romans, Siena flourished during its golden age in the 13th and 14th centuries as a center of the textile and banking industries, achieving great power and wealth.

Today, a UNESCO World Heritage site, life continues to revolve around the historic town center, an intricate network of 13th-century houses, shops, palazzi (palaces) and narrow cobblestone alleys that lead to the shell-shaped Piazza del Campo, where the festive and spectacular Palio, Tuscany's world famous horse race, takes place annually. Siena's extensive array of grand medieval and Renaissance monuments include the impressive 330-foot-high 14th-century Torre del Mangia bell tower and the monumental Gothic Duomo, whose splendid façade is striped in white and green marble. Siena's medieval town hall, the Palazzo Pubblico, still in use today, is a wonderful example of 14th-century Gothic design, adorned with exquisite frescoes by Italy's Renaissance masters, including Ambrogio Lorenzetti.

San Gimignano

Designated a World Heritage site by UNESCO, the enchanting hill town of San Gimignano is one of the best preserved medieval sites in Europe. During the Middle Ages, it prospered as a major stop on the pilgrimage route to Rome. The "City of Beautiful Towers," where local merchants built impressive campanili (towers) as symbols of their wealth and prestige, became one of the richest communities in Tuscany. Today, 14 of the original towers line the Piazza della Cisterna (the town's central square), and the city continues to thrive as a center of the local wine trade. The city's impressive highlights include Piazza del Duomo (Cathedral Square), the remarkable 166-foot-high tower of the Palazzo Vecchio del Podestà, built in 1239; the stately Palazzo del Popolo (Town Hall), where city business has been conducted since the 13th century; and the Museo Civico (Civic Museum), a small but remarkable museum featuring an exquisite collection of Renaissance frescoes by Memmo di Filippuccio and Lippo Memmi.

Chianti

Distinguished by its rustic landscape of medieval castles, lush hills and mile upon mile of dense, green vineyards and olive groves, Chianti has been extolled for its beauty and fertile soil since the Etruscans named it more than 2,500 years ago after the prominent Clante-i family. Chianti is synonymous with its wine, the finest of which is produced in Chianti Classico, a tiny region only 31 miles long and 19 miles wide.

Montalcino/ Sant'Antimo Option

Despite its imposing 14th-century Fortezza (fortress), classic flower-covered stone houses and steep and winding alleys, the idyllic Montalcino is perhaps best known for Brunello di Montalcino, Tuscany's most revered wine. This delightful town reveals a pleasant mix of intimate streets lined with traditional enotecas (wine shops) and impressive 13th-century public buildings.

The beautiful Chianti region has produced its famous blends of sangiovese grapes since the 13th century.

Surrounded by the picturesque Tuscan hills near Montalcino, the enchanting Abbey of Sant'Antimo has captivated pilgrims, writers and artists for hundreds of years. Though local tradition holds that the church was founded by the legendary Holy Roman Emperor Charlemagne in the eighth century, the primary building standing today was constructed in 1118 and is widely considered to be one of the most beautiful Romanesque churches in Italy. The abbey's resident monks maintain a simple life that revolves around ancient rituals practiced for generations, including the daily ritual of Gregorian chants.

Cucina Toscana

Renowned as the most cultured of the Italian provinces, Tuscany's cuisine is actually rooted in the modest, but intensely flavorful culinary tradition, la cucina povera Toscana (Tuscan peasant cooking). Based on "Santa Trinitá Mediterranea"—the Mediterranean "Holy Trinity" of wine, bread and olive oil—Tuscan food is noted for its use of exceptionally fresh vegetables, rich cheeses and a wide selection of exquisitely grilled and roasted meats and game.

The region's quality olive oils and wines are showcased during a specially arranged Olive Oil Tasting, with an olive oil expert who will provide insights on the production and flavors of the spicy, green Tuscan extra virgin olive oil.

Tuscany's noble tradition of winemaking can be traced back to more than 3,000 years ago when the Etruscans domesticated the forebear of the region's signature Sangiovese grape. Connoisseurs and novices alike will delight in sampling the region's dazzling array of selections from a new generation of Tuscan wines. The exclusive visit and tasting in the Chianti region provides an ideal opportunity to savor the harmony of Tuscan cuisine and wine in the heart of Italy.

Elaine Trigiani has authored guidebooks and cookbooks and is a certified Region of Tuscany Olive Oil taster. She presents olive oil tasting seminars, teaches cooking lessons and guides culinary excursions in Tuscany. Elaine will direct a simple tasting and share her knowledge about olive oil based on years of insight gleaned from local producers, farmers, home cooks and chefs. A graduate of The University of Notre Dame, Elaine has lived in Italy for the last ten years and her passion for olive oil will open the door to explore spectacular Florentine and Tuscan culinary traditions.

Discover firsthand the delights of preparing Tuscan cuisine, famous for its delectable flavors and rustic simplicity.
